IS PUBLIC VIRTUE DECLINING The assumed degeneracy of our times is a favorite theme with many gloomy writers. On the part of some it is purely a political artifice without sincerity or candor; on the part of others it seems to be a real delusion. They draw a dark picture in which a general deterioration of public morals, a wide-spread decade of healthy public spirit and a rapid growth of corruption and extravagunce make up the melanuboly shades. It is not merely in public places that they effect to find this demoralization. They fancy a sad loss of tone and a signal decline of the stout old virtue even among the people picture in which a general deterioration of public morals, a wide-spread decade of healthy public spirit and a rapid growth of corruption and extravagance make up the melancholy shades. It is not merely in public places that they effect to find this demoralization. They fancy a sad loss of tone and a signal decline of the stout old virtue even among the people themselves.

It would not have been strange if such effects had, indeed, been perceptible. The country has passed through scenes and events well calculated to put its best qualities to a severe test.

A period of war is often followed by an epoch of demoralization, and both its heightened passions and its extraordinary exertions frequently leave seams and sears in the temper of the public mind as well as in the face of society. The Government has come to handle immense sams. The people have been made familiar with vast figures. The inflated prices of the war and the sudden accumulation of colossal fortunes, rising up in a day like Aladdin's palace, have tended to create a fever of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with these changed conditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with these changed conditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with these changed conditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with these changed conditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with these changed conditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of speculation and a rage for wealth. Under these circumstances, and with the second proper in the sum of the speculation of t ditions it would not, we say, be strange if the old sobriety of judgment and force of conscience and elevation of tone sufdecauseence and elevation of tone sur-tered some decay. No other nation has passed through such a period without a lapse of public morality, and we may count ourselves remarkably fortunate if we altogether escape the permicious influence of such causes.

And yet while recognizing all this, we do not share the morone apprehensions which find expression in some quarters. We believe the heart of the people is sound. Nay, more, it would be safe to say that considering the amount of revenues and disbursements now handled, there has never been less miss handled. A DELIGITYCH. THOUGHT.—When the first love is over, there comes an better than at the present time. The honselv of the general service is indisputable. Here and there a subordinate may prove faithless, as happens in every private business; but the integrity of the service as a whole stands unimpeached, and in proportion to the magnitude of is trusts, no Administration in our history has been as staniess as that its traists, no Administration in our bistory has been as stainless as that of President Grant. So far as the people are concerned, the evidence that they have not lost their moral vitality is conclusive. It is shown in the vigor with which they rose up against the Tammany ring. It is, perhaps, even more strikingly shown in the unsparing condemnation which they visit upon the salary-grab and all its participants—more strikingly because the wrong was less flagrant and outrageous. There had been smallar transactions before without exciting any deep public reprobation. The salary of Congressmen had several times been increased, always carrying back pay with it. It had never before roused the strict of any such storm of popular indignation, any such storm of popular indignation, and the deep, determined and unquench-able teeling in the present case is an unable teeining in the present case is an un-mistakable testimony to the strong mor-al sense of the people.

Another evidence in the same direc-tion is the defeat of General Butler tion is the defeat of General Butler against the most extraordinary appliances. That was pre-eminently a triumph of public merality and conscience, and it proved that the moral sentiment of the people is as alert and powerful now as ever. We might refer to many other facts proving the same thing, but these different and striking instances will sufface. Their character is unmistakable. eir character is unmistakable: and in the face of such illustrations there is no reason for saying that there is any general demoralization of the publi mind or any lowering of its tone.—[Al-baty (N. Y.) Journal.

THE "SOCIAL EVIL" QUESTION. - Dr. Gustavus Holland, an old and well known physician of Sau Francisco, Superin-tendant of a Lying-in Asylum, has been traveling in Europe several months, and on his return will endeavor to have a law on his return will endeavor to have a law passed by the Legislature to regulate the social evil. The system proposed is that of medical inspection, and removal to the proper pospitals in case of sickness. Dr. Holland had visited among other cities Paris, London, Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen, and found that wherever such a sanitary law had deen enforced there has been a remarkable lessening of disease, Dr. Elliott to the centrary notwithstanding. There is no regulation in London, but the attention of the health officers is being directed very seriously to it, and there are indications that the same system that there is in Paris will be introduced at an early day. The operation of the heat of tem that there is in Paris will be intro-duced at an early day. The operation of the law in Paris is as satisfactory as ever. Dr. Holland does not claim that there is a total extinction of disease, but affirms that there is such a diminution as plainly indicates the wisdom and propriety of the law. This information was obtained from him by a reporter of the St. Louis Repúblican, while the Doctor was mak-ing an inspection of the St. Louis Hos-pital. He does not pretend to enter into a consideration of the moral aspects of the case, but deals with its merits from a medical point. He approves of the St. the case, but deals with its ments from a medical point. He approves of the St. Louis system, and informed the reporter that when he made the effort to have it passed in San Francisco, the Board of Health and City Conneil were unanimously in favor of it, but the bill was pocketed by a committee of the Legislature. He proposes to renew the effort this Winter, and will, on arriving home, prepare statistical statements on the subject.—S. F. Bulletin.

FROM WEALTH TO WANT .- A gentle man who has been spending a few days at Baden, a watering-place about twenty miles from Vienna, tells the following miles from Vienna, tells the following story: Two years ago I was in Europe and met an American lady in Paris and afterwards in Rome, who resided in Chicago and had come abroad for avacation. She was a most charming personage, well educated, brilliantly accomplished, and perfectly correct in her deportment. I jeturned to America and heard nothing more of her. At Baden last week, as I was passing along the hall of the hotel and hear the door of one of a suite of rooms belonging to a Russian countess, I saw a plainly dressed woman. She looked around as I approached and then retreated hastily; the single glance convinced me that it was my acquaintance of two years ago. That evening I was introduced to the Russian countess, and asked her if she knew Mrs. introduced to the Russian countess, and asked her if she knew Mrs. —, an American. On her saying that she did know her, I asked her if I had not seen her in the hotel. She then told me that he lady was in Baden and was her companion, and "her history," she said. "is a strange one. She was in Europe two years ago with an abundance of money and supposed herself wealthy. Her husband was in business in Chicage, and at the time of the great fire there he was burned to death and all their property was swept away. The morning after the fire she was a widow with no money except what she possessed at the time. I had known her for some time, and when I heard of her misfortunes I asked her to travel with me and be my companion. She consented, and is now with me. She dresses plainly, as you saw her, and bears her misfortune very patiently. She declines to go into society any more, and devotes herself entirely to me. She is a very worthy lady, and I shall always befriend her." T. R. BUTLER. ASSAYER.

dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the runting of leaves or rattling of chariots, unessiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, difindence
